William Lloyd Garrison

Read the story

William Lloyd Garrison began publishing The Liberator in Boston. The newspaper called for ending slavery. Black and white abolitionists worked in many ways for freedom. Publishing helped spread arguments and news.

Garrison's newspaper was one part of a movement shaped by Black activists, speakers, writers, and communities. Compare a famous editor's work with the organizing that supported abolition.

Think, talk, and show evidence

1. State the main idea. Support it with two details from the reading.
2. Explain a change or challenge described in the text. Which words support your answer?
3. Use one vocabulary word in a new sentence about this event.
4. What can the image and caption help explain? What can they not tell you?

Follow-up reading: Horace Mann and public schools

1837

Horace Mann became secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education. He worked to improve public schools and teacher preparation. He argued that education mattered for the community. Access still differed among children.

Reform did not instantly produce equal schooling. Examine attendance, funding, race, disability, language, and curriculum. Mann's influence is important, but school history includes many other teachers, families, and reformers.

Compare the two readings. Explain one similarity or difference using a detail from each. Their order does not prove that one caused the other.
